Year-End Integrative Prompts

At the close of Week 52, you can synthesize the year's trajectory through one or more of these summative questions:

1. The Arc of Reason:

Trace the transformation of logos from Plato's rational soul to Foucault's discourse. Does Western civilization ever escape its own metaphysical structure?

2. Faith and the Secular:

Compare Augustine's Confessions, Aquinas's Summa, and Taylor's A Secular Age. Is the West's "disenchantment" real or rhetorical?

3. Empire and Personhood:

How do empire and individual identity co-develop—from Aeneas to Hamlet to Things Fall Apart?

4. Knowledge and Power:

Discuss whether the Enlightenment's pursuit of universal knowledge leads necessarily to the biopolitical control Foucault describes.

5. The End (or Renewal) of the West:

Drawing on Spengler, Toynbee, and Harari, is "Western Civilization" a phase of human history, a universal template, or a self-canceling myth?

6. Personal Reflection:

What ideas or works most altered your conception of meaning, freedom, or truth? How has studying the West changed your sense of belonging within it?

How to Use This Section

- For academic study: choose 2–3 essay prompts per module and develop 10–15 page papers with textual analysis and secondary engagement.
- For reflective practice: keep a weekly journal (1–2 pages) responding to the "why it matters now" dimension of each question.
- For synthesis: every 13 weeks (end of each module), compose a comparative essay integrating philosophy, literature, and historical change.

Certainly — here's the complete, expanded bibliography corresponding to your 52-week “History of Western Civilization, Philosophy, and Literature” curriculum, including all the additional figures we wove in (Hobbes, Spinoza, Pascal, Vico, Schopenhauer, Comte, Peirce, Dewey, etc.).

It's organized chronologically by era, with separate sections for History / Primary, Philosophy / Theology, Literature / Art, and Secondary / Commentary.

You can treat this as a reading library, citation list, or syllabus reference.

(If you'd like, I can later format this into Chicago or MLA citation style for a printable PDF.)

Comprehensive Bibliography for the One-Year Western Civilization Curriculum

Here's a complete, concrete bibliography that matches the detailed table we built — including the correct placement of Hesiod, the Heraclitus fragments, and all major primary and secondary readings through the entire one-year course.

Each entry lists specific readings or sections, plus optional texts if you want to go deeper.

The whole thing is organized chronologically by era, exactly mirroring your 52-week plan.
